Time . . . How do you define It? An elusive intangible? An ever-flowing, never stationary element? Time is almost impossible to think of except in terms of a particular time, which is anticipated, arrives, and then is immediately and irrevocably gone. This almost indefinable word we have taken as the theme of our 1964 AMICI. Realizing the magnitude of such a theme, we have confined ourselves to the three hundred and forty-five thousand, six hundred and fifty-five minutes called the high school years.

Those years of constant change . . . of our own special kind of loneliness . . . of gaiety and excitement too exultant to express . . . of hurt and pain too intense to bear. It is a wild time, a happy time, a rebellious time!

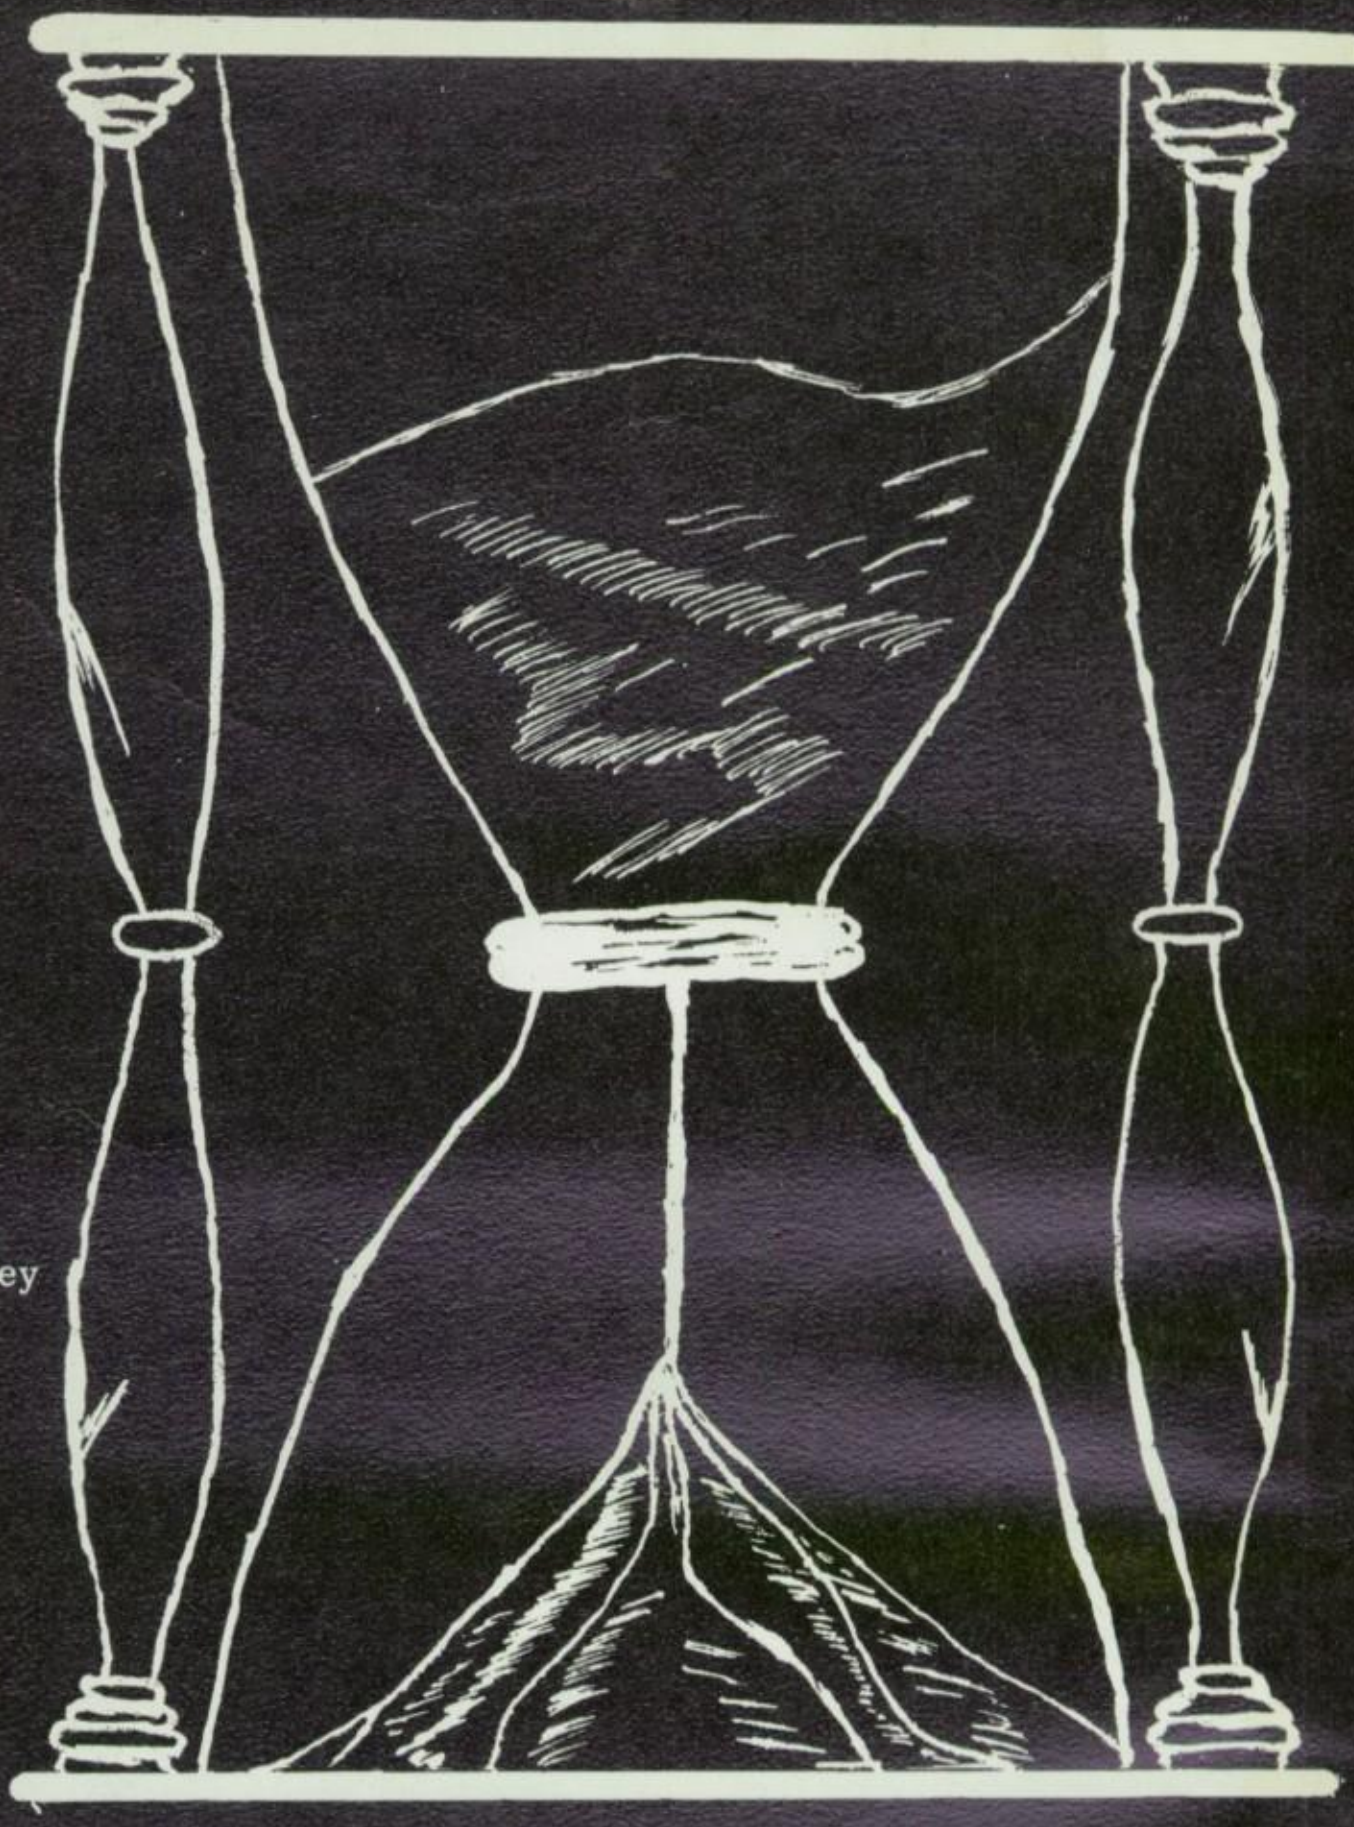
We are told by those who already passed through these years that we will never again be as sentimental, as sure of what we know; that we will never again be as unhappy or as much in love; that we will never again feel that the world lies before us so beautiful and new and ours to make it what we will.

We do know that we are awakening, that we are enthusiastic, and that we are reaching out for everything that a later time can bring . . . Time . . .

"What is Time? The shadow on the clock,
The running of sand,
Day and night, summer and winter,
Months, years, centuries.

These are but arbitrary and outward signs,
The measure of time, not time itself.
Time is the life of the soul."

-Longfellow



"We live in deeds, not years;
in thoughts, not breaths;
In feelings, not in figures on a dial.
We should count time by heart-
throbs.
He most lives
Who thinks most--feels the noblest--acts the best."
- Philip James Bailey

"To every thing there is a season, and a time to every purpose under the heaven."
- Ecclesiastes.

In Grateful Recognition

Dedicated To

Because of the unique person we have come to [illegible]d in you, our words cannot express our true feelings of you. There are no words to explain the urge to create, to do, to work, that you have inspired in us. The energy and anticipation with which you approach each new class cannot be bounded by words. But the best tribute is paid to you in time, for it is time which immortalizes and enriches memory. And the memory that we hold of you shall be rich and full . . . we shall see you again, entering the classroom with a staggering load of the countless papers and books you always had, we will recall how readily we received understanding and guidance from you, and we shall always remember the individuality and creativity you so richly possess and have tried so faithfully to instill in us.

In tribute to you and because of the respect and love which we have for you, we dedicate the 1964 AMICI to you MRS. DENE STYERS.

As a teacher or

As an actress of Time . . . Service . . . Self

XII

The teacher, who has been called "a sower of unseen harvests . . . a feeble, persistent antagonist of the triumphant things that rule him," has need of time . . . time to teach his classes, sponsor activities, and counsel students . . . time to meet with parents, enrich his knowledge, and plan his courses . . . time for patience, for determination, for instruction.

IX

III

And with his share of time--no more than is allotted to others--he can touch and influence more lives than almost any other person. He can see those triumphant things that rule him multiplied a hundredfold each year and still retain his enthusiasm for those he teaches the next year.

VI

Administration

"Had we but world enough, and time . . ." - Marvell

MR. HENRY C. WALTERS, PRINCIPAL

Because Mr. Walters directs all phases of school activities, his separate duties are too numerous to list here. They do range from planning the curriculum to cheering the athletic teams to victory. Since his arrival as principal three years ago, Mr. Walters has shown his many administrative abilities by working with students, teachers, community, and school officials to co-ordinate all school activities into a smoothly operating and outstanding institution, Mr. Walters' belief that "the school exists to serve the student" is the guiding principle behind his every action.

Administration

MR. CLARENCE H. LOVELL
ASSISTANT PRINCIPAL

As assistant principal, Mr. Lovell handles many duties which contribute to the efficient operation of the school, ranging from checking daily attendance to supervising the distribution of all books. In addition to his administrative tasks, he also teaches three classes of freshman English.

MRS. MARY ELLEN LOVELL, TREASURER

MRS. LENA HOLLADY, SECRETARY

Officially Mrs. Hollady is the school secretary and a competent one she is; however she is also a shoulder to cry on, a cheery smile, and interested listener, and custodian of the coke machine. Mrs. Lovell, in her second year as school treasurer, shares the office with Mrs. Hollady. At any time of the school day she may be seen taking in money or writing receipts.

Mrs. Lewis has the difficult task of preparing lunch for hundreds of students each day, and we are grateful to her and her excellent staff for their efforts to prepare appetizing and nutritious lunches for us.

Bessie Hart, Jesse Hayes, Dasie Sides, O.J. Norris, Bernice Needham, Irene King, Elizabeth Reynolds, Ruth Pitts, Ruth Lewis.

English

The high school curriculum requires that each student take time for four years of English. In each year's English class the student meets memorable figures and new ideas in his reading; he struggles to accomplish that most difficult feat --- writing clear prose; he polishes his speaking voice through talks, speeches, and poetry; he learns the importance and observes the results of careful and objective listening.

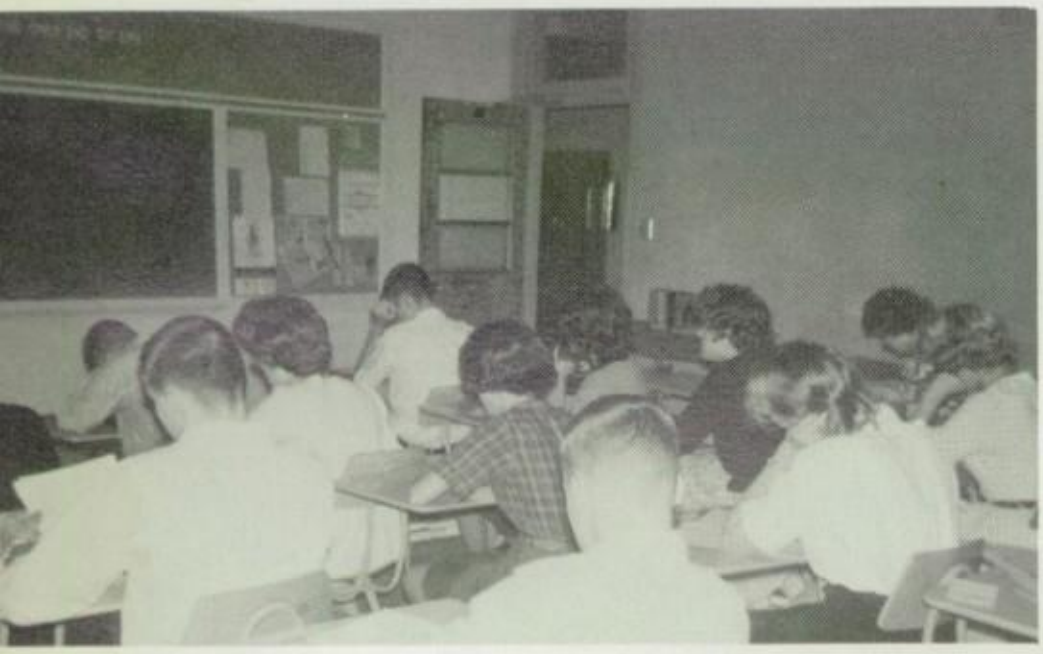
MR. GEORGE W. RUTTER

MRS. DENE STYERS



Juniors take a short story test.

Sophomores study for a vocabulary quiz.

French and Latin

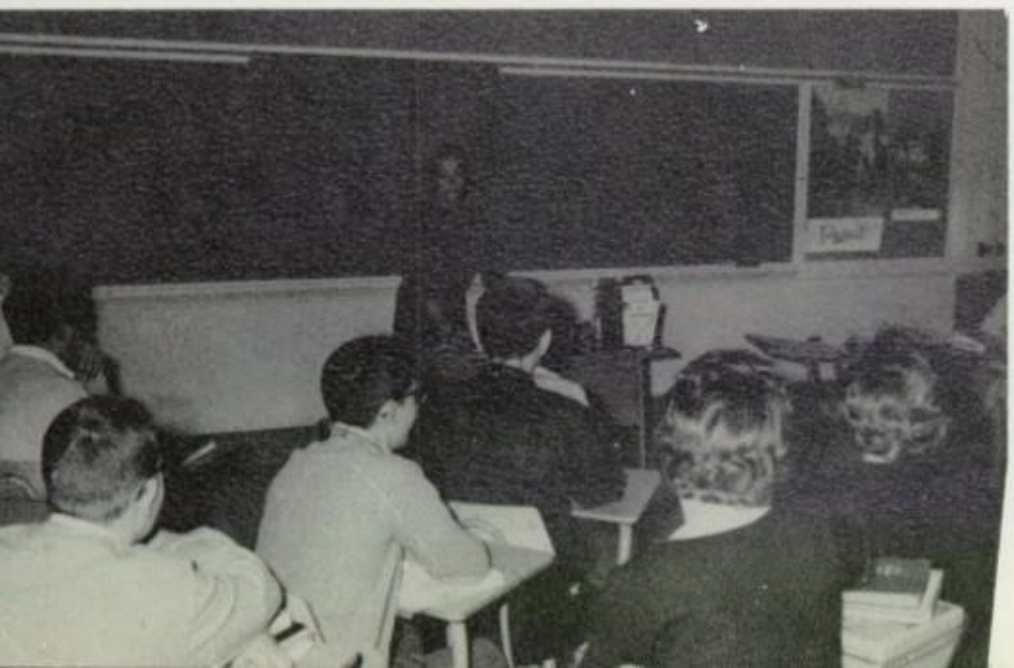
One hears a "BONJOUR" or an "EXCUSEZ-MOI" as students make time for French class. Special phonic equipment provides extra interest, while a Christmas caroling party EN FRANCAIS makes the language live for its students. Each year the French III class translates a fairy tale and puts it into play form; then the play is given by French I and II classes for the entire high school.

Latin classes have been larger and busier than ever. Latin I students are learning basic vocabulary while Latin II students prepare for Caesar. Both groups enjoyed participating in a program of Latin Christmas carols, and both groups have gained a greater appreciation of Roman culture through working on special projects.

MR. GEORGE W. RUTTER

MRS. JO STARR

COMPRENEZ-VOUS MES ELEVES?

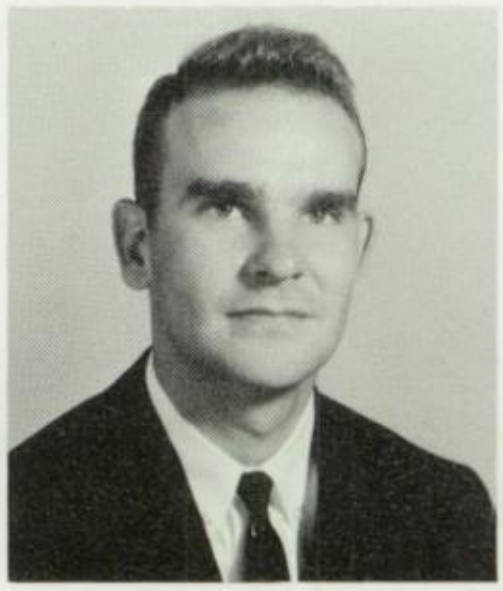


It's Greek to me.

Science

Science classes provide students with opportunities to study life in all its forms. Students learn the classification of living and non-living things; they learn how to operate scientific apparatus. The Science Department strives to arouse student curiosity about the concepts and spirit of science. The department further encourages students to gather knowledge about things and forces around them from their own observations and investigations. Courses in general science, biology, chemistry, and earth science are offered.

MISS ROBIN FARR



MR. PAUL PROCTOR

I think we've discovered a new element.

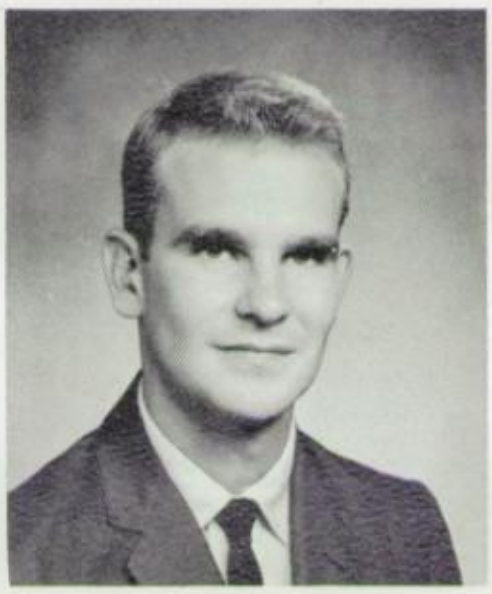
Hello, down there.

Mathematics

The Mathematics Department at Guilford offers courses in general mathematics, algebra, and geometry. These courses are designed to develop the student's ability to reason and think logically, to solve simple day to day problems, and to prepare college-bound students for the mastery of college mathematics.

The math students at Guilford certainly appear to be studious and dedicated. They let NOTHING interfere with their Thursday night studying---Friday algebra quizzes, you know. They spend more time in study halls studying math than they spend on all other subjects combined.

MRS. ANNA B. ELLER



MR. PAUL PROCTOR

MR. DARWIN SOWERS

Did he say one inch or one foot?

$X^2 + Y^2$ = frustration

Social Studies

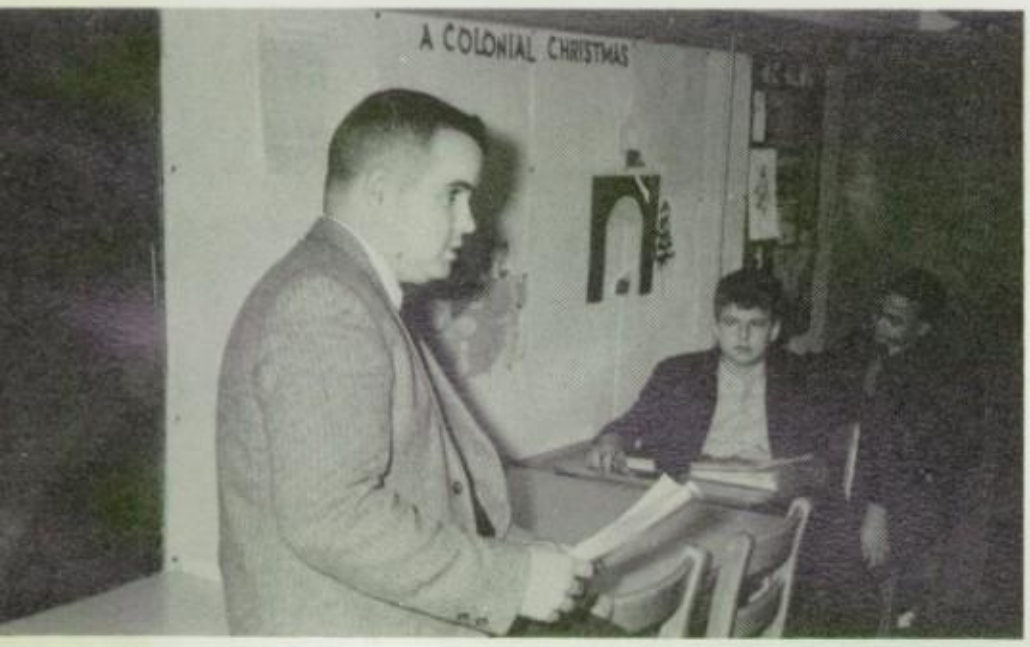
The Social Studies Department includes history, which in a way, is the study of time, all the time that has gone on before. At Guilford all students study United States history and North Carolina history, and those who choose may study the history of the world or geography of the world. In civics and problems of American democracy classes students discuss and study their government and events of current interest. They learn that the "past is prologue."

MISS MARIE BONDURANT

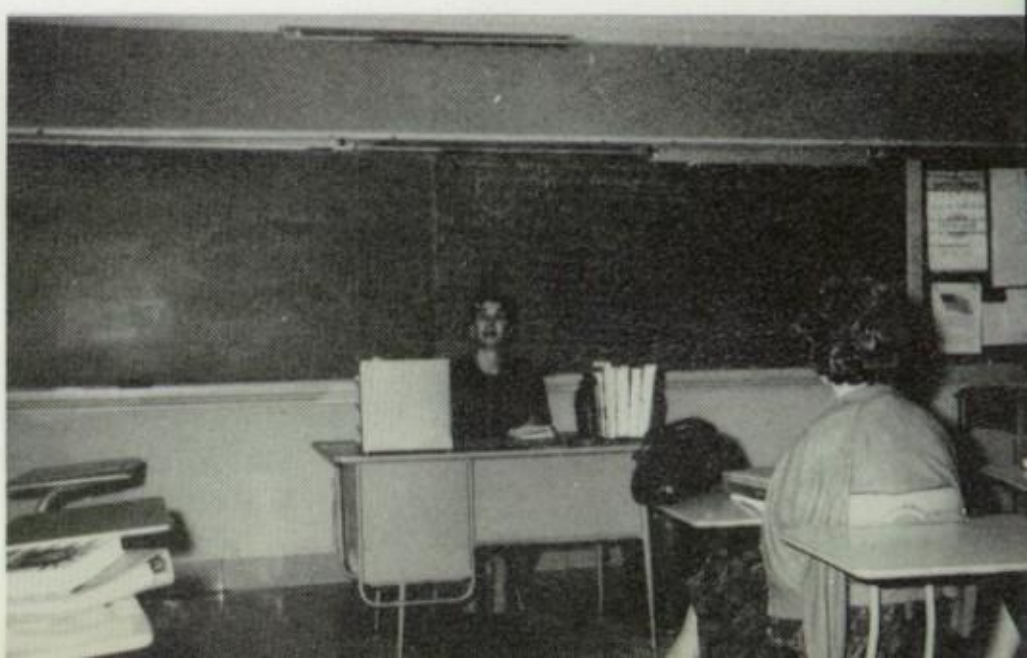
MR. ED CARROLL

MRS. JANE HOOKS

You call him Tutankhamen; I'll call him Tut.



Be quiet or I'll stomp on your toes.



Business Education

The two efficient teachers of the Commercial Department provide students with professional instruction in typing, shorthand, office practice, bookkeeping, business English, and math. These courses are designed to meet the common needs of all students and the vocational needs of those who desire to prepare for a career in business.

MRS. FAYE CECIL

MRS. NANCY COBLE

What was the answer to number two?

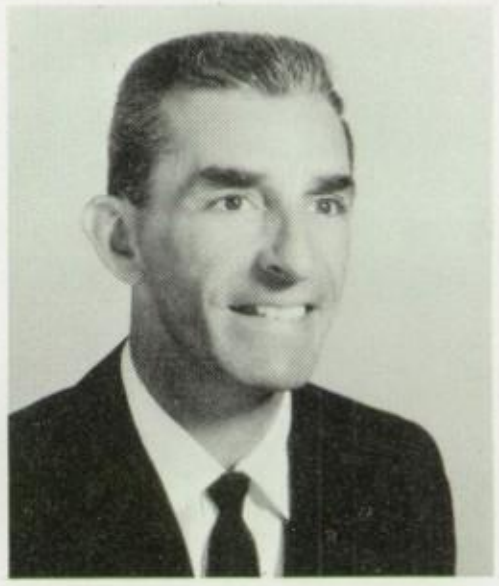
But I always spell my name Pf%zv&kt.

Art and Music

For two years Guilford has offered students interested in the study and creation of art an opportunity to learn of our artistic heritage. Both serious art students and those not so serious have learned to appreciate, if not like, nearly all art forms. Last year's trip to view the MONA LISA and frequent trips to college art exhibits have been highlights of the class. Creative efforts by the students themselves resulted in five Scholastic Art Awards in 1963 out of the thirteen allowed entries.

Guilford's already excellent Music Department has expanded this year in both size and quality. The chorus has grown into two choruses. The band has acquired snappy, new, black uniforms and has moved into spacious, new, sound-proof quarters.

MRS. JO BRAY



MR. RICHARD SPENCER

And now for our next selection . . .

They didn't appreciate Van Gogh either, Larry.

Physical Education

The aim of physical education is to promote physical fitness among students. Physical education is required of all seventh, eighth, and ninth grade students, and those who are more skilled are encouraged to participate in athletics and advanced physical education. Students are taught the principles of good health and study a unit of first aid. Calisthenics, team sports, and individual sports help the student to develop co-ordination and bodily fitness.

Mr. Allen Jones

Mrs. Gladys Pickerel

1001 . . . 1002 . . . 1003.

So I decided to wear my gym suit today.

Home Economics

Home economics is a required subject for all freshman girls and is elected by many upperclassmen. Home Economics I and II train young girls not only for the time when they must be capable home managers but also train them to be more poised and efficient teen-agers, who will be helpful at home. The family living class teaches boys as well as girls to make wise choices in their future family life.

Mrs. Carol Miller

Stand back everybody!

The latest fad in toasters.

Guidance and Library

Through testing, informing, and counseling, Mr. Parks uses his time to help students plan wisely for their student present and their future. He aids students in making their educational and vocational plans and adjusting to school life.

The Guilford library is capably staffed and endowed with almost twelve books per student. It offers materials for entertainment, research, and enrichment. In addition to the latest and most authoritative books in all fields the library affords students and teachers a wide choice of filmstrips, records, clippings, and periodicals.

Mr. E. Bennett Parks

Mrs. Sandra Smith

They WOULD have to take the magazines out!

Other than that, what's your problem?

XII

Seniors seem to think of time in terms of the last time. In early fall there is the new excitement of knowing you are a senior and having everyone else recognize the fact. At no time does this recognition seem more significant than when the rest of the school stands up, impressed and attentive, as you march to your chapel seat.

But with the end of football season, it begins to be the last time . . . the last football game . . . the last pep rally . . . the last high school class . . . the last wonderful, teary march to chapel. It's time for too many things, you think. If you could slow it down.

IX

III

Classes, homework, reports . . . you seem to take them more seriously. College Day, choosing superlatives, annual pictures . . . you enjoy senior privileges. College boards, senior pictures, applications to colleges and for jobs . . . you plan for after graduation.

Then with a sense of relief you turn in that final research paper; you giggle and grow silent as you try on your cap and gown; you envy freshmen just a little.

For Seniors . . . it's the last time.

Time for juniors is that next rung on the ladder of time toward being a senior. Juniors lead a fast and furious pace almost from the very beginning of the school year.

Those magazine sales preparatory to the great Junior-Senior . . . the PSAT . . . the all-important rings and all the arguing that goes on before the final decision . . . casting for the junior play . . . all the arguing over the when, where, and how of the Junior-Senior and finally the posh event itself . . . elections for coveted positions as seniors.

IX

III

Juniors become authorities on United States history and write a research paper to prove it. They become authorities on American literature and write a short story to prove that.

For Juniors . . . it's a fast time.

There doesn't seem to be anything particularly significant about the time we are sophomores, at least nothing as traditional or outstanding as there is for the other classes. At least we're not freshmen; and when we remember the hazing we took, we become the leaders in making life miserable for the new crop of freshmen. Still we're not juniors or seniors. Perhaps we're just beginning to try to figure out just who we really are and where we're going and what we're going to do with our time.

IX

III

We all tried to see something under that microscope, and we tried to act blasé about cutting up frogs in biology class. We finally had a chance to take French and typing and art. It was another year of algebra for the stronghearted, and no more gym suits unless we were really the athletic type.

For Sophomores . . . it's a good time.

Everybody knows what a time the freshmen have! The stupid frosh! The butt of all upperclassmen jokes! It's rough, for a while, anyway. It's a big let-down. We just had it made being big dogs in junior high and now here we are low men on the totem pole in high school.

We can't open our lockers. We sit in the wrong class half a period before we discover our mistake. We get pushed to the back in lunch lines. We get the neck of the chicken and all the dirty chores. We can't be varsity, only junior varsity. We have less status than desks. Nobody knows our names for at least half a semester.

For Freshmen . . . it's a quiet time.

"Our time has not yet come" say the high school students. Not our high school years, but junior high years have. And that is a big thing in itself. Changing classes for the first time gives us a new feeling of independence. We have gym suits and a special period for physical education; we make that important trip to Raleigh; we have our own special Christmas dances.

IX

III

And this year of all years being a seventh or eighth grader had its special significance. For half a year we existed as a house divided, but on a memorable January day we were all settled together in the newest addition of Guilford School.

So no pity please, upperclassmen. These are special years with wonderful teachers to guide us and prepare us. When the time does come, we'll be quite ready to handle the "big time" of high school life.

There are those special times . . . those long anticipated events . . . those big two-or-three-times-a-year spectaculars that culminate weeks of planning, buying, decorating, hoping, dreaming. You couldn't endure a life of constant spectaculars, and that's what makes them so special--their rarity. Unlike other school activities, these are almost always at night, and the after-hours time gives an added glamour to these special events.

Homecoming Attendants

On October 25 Guilford High began its memorable, two-day homecoming celebration with a parade originating at the Quaker Village shopping center. The parade included Guilford's marching band and majorettes, floats, homecoming attendants, cheerleaders, and equestrians.

That night the activities continued with a football game between Guilford and Gibsonville. The parade floats were again displayed, and senior Ronda McFarland was crowned homecoming queen during the halftime ceremonies. The queen's attendants were Karen Ham and Janis Grooms, seniors; Karen Sharpe, Cindy Stack, and Barbara Sparks, juniors; Becky McDowell, Jane Palmer, and Ellen Shelton, sophomores; Sandy Loftin and Jeanette Shue, freshmen.

The following night a semi-formal dance was held in the gym, and this gala affair completed the homecoming festivities.

Christmas Court

On December 20 Guilford High held its annual Christmas dance. The scene of this festive affair was the school cafeteria beautifully decorated in a Christmas theme. The Invaders, a musical group composed of former Guilford students, entertained the large crowd with a variety of musical selections. Lovely Linda Duncan was crowned queen; her escort was Danny Newnam. The queen's attendants were Sandy Hoffman, escorted by Ronald Obston and Kathryn Wakefield, escorted by Jimmy Handlon. Talented Martha Cox was mistress of ceremonies. The high school grade parents were the hostesses for the memorable evening.

Time for sports! What a welcome cry that is whether it comes to the ears of the president of student council who also shines on the pitcher's mound or comes to the non-academic fellow who has trouble passing everything except physical education. Possibly no other part of school life offers parents and community so much time to observe their school in ✦ action. The curriculum has been planned to insure that every student can receive physical training, and for those who excel there are varsity and junior varsity athletic teams.

In fall it's time for football, winter brings in basketball, and with spring comes baseball and track. Those are the big sports that attract the most attention; however all through the year students of varying abilities are finding time for soccer, badminton, volleyball, tumbling, golf, and intramural teams.

It's time to play!

Just finding time to keep up day-to-day assignments may be all some students can do; and this is no small job. But those students with special interests and talents and with qualities of leadership find the time or take the time for what are called extra-curricular activities. These activities have either grown out of a classroom subject or are necessary for the efficient functioning of a high school. These activities represent another area in which the school serves the student.

Student Council

A summit meeting

Student government at Guilford rests in the hands of the Student Council, a legislative body composed of representatives from each homeroom and school organization. The president of the 1963-64 session was Ronald Obston, a capable parliamentarian. The other officers, also known for their leadership and scholarship, were Danny Rogers, vice-president; Gay Farlow, secretary; and Arnold Isley, treasurer. Mrs. Jane Hooks and Mr. Paul Proctor were faculty advisors.

The HORNET

COBLE AND RUTTER SERVE AS ADVISORS

Mr. Rutter and Mrs. Coble, as advisors for the HORNET, proofread the articles, advise on layouts, and help solve any other problems that may arise.

Mr. Rutter teaches English IV and Latin. Mrs. Coble teaches typing, business English, and office pratice.

A NEW HORNET

The HORNET changed publishers this year and acquired a new format. Although not as shiny as before, the new HORNET has more space for school news.

WEAVER EDITOR, MOORE ASSISTANT EDITOR

Shelia Weaver moved up from business manager of last year's paper to the position of editor of the HORNET this year.

DeRee Moore, a junior has been Shelia's capable assistant.

SPECIAL ISSUE

Under Shelia's editorship this year's HORNET has given us a special literary issue. This issue included outstanding pieces of writing from English classes throughout the senior and junior high school. She has also promised us the traditional senior issue.

NEW EDITORS

This year's art editor is Laura Ward, and Lynn Key and Kay Holjes have handled the sports news. Beverly Larsen is the society editor, and David Higgins is news editor.

OTHER OFFICERS

This year's business manager is Hanna Hoke. Brenda Walters, the circulation manager, has worked hard to sell a record number of HORNETS.

Chorus

Laura Ward, pianist; Mr. Spencer, director.

Under the supervision of Mr. Richard Spencer, the Guilford Chorus is striving to become the best choral group in the county. Judging from the awards they received last year, we believe they will become just that.

The Chorus presented its annual Thanksgiving Day program this year for a high school assembly program. In December the Chorus, accompanied by the band, presented a Christmas program for the P.T.A.

This spring the Chorus has participated in several choral competitions.

Guilford Band marches in Homecoming Parade.

You rang?

Stop before you mess up her hair!

All things come to him who will but wait.

Who said students don't study enough?

"And Time

And the times we lost.

Who's excited? I'm not excited.

Bottoms up!

Who said teachers don't "cut up" in class?

The Was . . ."

You misplaced your bus?

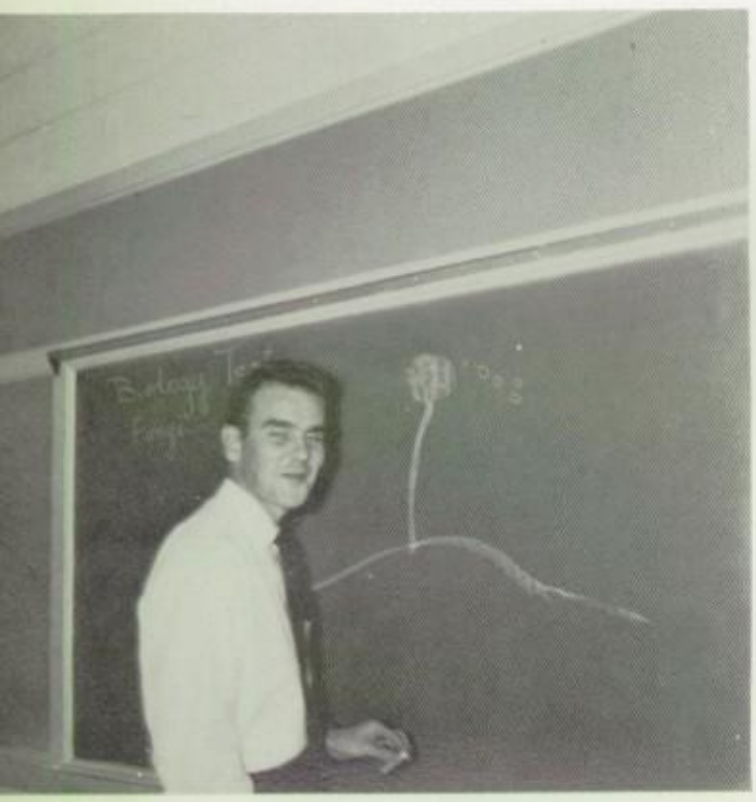
No! No! Musn't touch.

Epitome of defeat.

On the full of the moon.

We've got a team! . . . WANTA BET.

Sing along with what?



Don't look now but there's a fungus among us.

My get-up-and-go got up and went.

Oh well! -

What do you mean we did it all wrong?

The inner sanctum.

Sometimes I feel I can almost fly.

Happy birthday.

Careful there.

DOWN . . . . . AND . . . . . OUT.

Those represented in other sections of this AMICI have given only of their time (although the tired Three will argue that they have given blood, sweat, tears, and better grades); however the businesses represented in the following pages have given that which wields a bigger power than time, talent, or work. They have given money. And bless them for it, for without their advertising the 1964 AMICI would be just a lovely unpublished product of its creators.

So, dear advertisers, thank you for your interest and your advertising. We believe that this advertising will be profitable for you longer than any other kind in which you might have invested.

GUILFORD COLLEGE

One of our junior girls wrote for a recent issue of a national magazine: "To me, Guilford, the oldest co-ed school in the South, is more than a college. It's a way of life: warm, friendly, and simple. There is unity and closeness throughout the student body that reflects the influence of the founding Quakers. For a private school our tuition is surprisingly low."
